LOCOFOCOISM.

It is now pretty generally understood that the loco-foco party have added to an eager love of AV, an inviolable thirst for FAVOR. In this place, and acquire power there are deep laid plans arranged with the witchery and skill of a practised and master hand. The every day roughness and familiar practices of the old General and his advisers, have given place to a compound of opinion and "right hand" practices that appear difficult to grasp or comprehend. The ardent and romantic and poetical minds have been called in service in preaching to the people and publishing to the world the refinements of metaphysical philosophy under the name of democracy. Of this class is Bryant, and Cooper, and Bancroft, and Bronson, and was the lately gifted, but now departed Leggett men alive to the delicate and sympathetic in mind, unacquainted and unpractised in the world, but dwelling in a world of intellectual and moral beings, the creations of their own fancies in the retirement of the closet. These men safely seated in the cushioned chairs of office, or removed from the wants and toils of life, speculate on the abstract idea of equality in its broadest and deepest sense, and under the name of democracy, elevate it to the character and clothe it in the drapery of that charity that came down from heaven, with God for its author. Abraham for its Father, the Son of God for its leader and impersonation, and St. Paul for its advocate and follower. They see in this principle an all pervading idea, which they call democracy, those forms and ties, that like an invisible membrane, binds all sentient beings in one, and connects them to the throne of Jehovah by an eternal chain formed of the golden links of sympathy and love. To them, society with its barriers, fashion with its cloths, sectarianism with its bitterness, and government with its demands and obstructions to individual freedom, are but so many hindrances to the progress of the face in the high road to human perfectibility and happiness. Reclining in their comfortable seats, and mistaking the creations of their own romantic minds for the every day operations of this "working day world," they have seized upon the great principles of the gospel of Christ, christened them with the name of democracy, and wrought out their abstract influence on the heart and life, into the remotest ages of the millennium.

"They feel more than a mother's pain, And yet bring forth less than a mother's hope."

For their finely wrought theories are about as practicable to man as he is, as is a gossamer wing for the sails of a Dutch ship of the line. The only thing human, like the rest of the world, in the minds of such men is, their desire for, and love of their food, raiment and salaries.

As an offset to those brilliant theories, and well designed to catch another class of customers, are proclaimed opinions of equality of a graver and more tangible character. The apostles of these latter opinions are Frances Wright, Doremont, Ming, Slama, and others who scoff at the idea of the existence of any God greater than themselves, and rail at the institutions of society. They urge a general equality, not in nature and capacity, but in meats and drinks and property, while they plead to have opened the flood gates of that "larger liberty" that shall secure to all a sensual heaven on earth. Every barrier to their wild projects is denounced as aristocratic as those who insist that the courtesies of life and the right of property shall be securely guarded. It is this class who think Aaron an aristocrat for having the precious oil poured upon his head, while the skimmings of the pot, they thought good enough for the common people. Such are the principles and the arguments made use of and adopted by this class of political preachers, who address themselves in the name of democracy to the sympathies of the "injured poor," and to the ignorant, and debased who have risen but one step in the scale of intellectual and moral life, above the matter that surrounds them.

Another class is composed of shrewd political men who study man for the purpose of railing him. They agree with the professions and approve the theory of each of the foregoing, and cunningly give direction to the power each acquires, for the purposes of their own advancement and personal gain. In this class are Van Buren, Benton and others of the same kidney, who with the loudest praises of the heaven of democracy, so industriously preached, gingle gold in their silver purses, and Absalom like, each cries "oh that I were made a judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause, might come unto me and I would do him justice," and gold which the few now share should be divided among all. They have their eye upon place and power, and cling to every means of effecting it, with the grasp of death. Personal advantage is the good they seek, and to accomplish this, they forget and neglect the wants and welfare of the country, and demand sacrifices only to party.

Others, again bug old party names, while they disregard the landmarks pursuing the shadow and losing the substance. As they drift down the stream, like unpractised swimmers, the shore seems to move along while they remain stationary. Then too, there are attached to this piebald and motley group, a host of the "ten centers" who go with the majority merely because it is such, or, because they hope to gain a little benefit from the changes to come. Personal advantage, and the hope of it, is the only general bond that binds together these conflicting and opposite opinions, and thus it is, while they are professing every thing they in fact do nothing.

But these things could all be endured with tolerable patience, did not the interests of the country suffer, and were not bad practices, and a political and moral depravity introduced into government and become active in individuals, to a degree that threatens to sweep all noble veneration which our fathers felt for stern integrity and the institutions of the country to die away and be forgotten by their descendants. It is really ridiculous, and rather amusing too, to hear men attached to the loco-foco party with all its unmixable elements and contradictions, undertake to represent those opposed to their all sorts of principles in detail, and none in the aggregate party, as having no definite and fixed political principles. But the ingenuity and hardness of some men surpass all expectation or belief.

We have thus enumerated the stand points in the loco-foco party the sources of opinion and the centres of influence; to which should be added the numerical strength of the body of the people, who from the high pretensions and extravagant professions of the party cherish it as a hope that some good may come of it, to the country. The influence of each class gains a few, and thus collectively they have been enabled for some time to hold a majority in the country. But the honest minded, those actuated by pure motives and an honest desire to do right, have, for sometime been comparing the conduct of the leaders with their professions, and as might be expected, are fast abandoning a party with so few fixed principles of real patriotism. On these men the hope of the country rests.

We have thus endeavored to represent loco-focoism as it is; and if the followers of that party, at either end, it makes but little difference which, are satisfied to sustain a party with as many head and horns as that has, for the purpose of sustaining a few brazen faced, red mouthed leaders in office, or the faint and remote hope of pocketing a favor, they are a good deal more willing to be accessory to wrong doing than we wish they were.

We are pleased to learn that Dunlap's Paintings are to remain in the city a few days longer, thus giving an opportunity to many in the city and vicinity to visit them, who have thus far been debarred in consequence of bad weather. An invitation has been extended to the gentleman who has them in charge, by a committee from Mr. Pomroy's Church. We understand they are to be put up in that Church to-day, and that the members of the Sabbath School are to visit them this afternoon.

LADIES' COMPANION. The June number of this deservedly popular Magazine has been received, and merits commendation for the neatness of its appearance, the richness of its embellishments and the spirit of its articles. Mr. Snowden the enterprising publisher, under whose management the Companion has continued to improve until it has become quite a favorite, deserves well of the public, and the happy talent of Mrs. Stephens, so well known in Maine, will always insure ardent friends and happy readers, in this part of our country. The articles of the present number are rich and varied; and among the contributors, we are happy to notice four persons, now or lately residents of our own State; they are, Mrs. Seba Smith, (the wife of Jack Downing,) Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, Chief Justice Meilen and John Neal. The embellishments are, a steel plate engraving, illustrating a beautiful song by Burns; a plate of the summer fashions—three figures, and two pages of music.

The Steamer British Queen is nearly completed. She registers 2016 tons, and is said to be a beautiful boat. A gentleman giving an account of her, says "her funnel was laying on deck, and I took a promenade of sixty feet through it and all standing." It must be a very large funnel, or he a very short man.

The Steamer Thorn, which is to run from the Kennebec to Portland, arrived at Portland from Boston, on Friday evening, and left immediately for Bath. She may be expected here on Wednesday evening, and will leave on Thursday morning at 7 o'clock for Bath and Gardiner. Fare to Gardiner $3.00, to Bath $2.50, meals extra.

There have been over seventy arrivals of brigs, schooners and sloops at this port since Saturday noon.

The Mexican correspondent of the New Orleans Louisiana gives the following interesting account of General Mexico, who was shot by order of Santa Ana.

Mexia protested in vain against this ignominious sentence; he was obliged to submit and prepared to die like a brave man. At the distance of twelve paces from the detachment that was to shoot him he received the first fire of the executioners with the calmness which only belongs to true courage and a just cause. Three balls struck him and wounded his shoulder. He stood firm, but to end his sufferings and the horrors of his situation, he begged the soldiers to fire upon him with the muskets close to his body. The soldiers complied with his request and approaching nearer, fired a second time, his heart was shot through, his head demolished, and his soul escaped to a happier region.

Such was the end of a man in whom the liberal party placed their last and dearest hopes. His death has terminated their noble enterprise. His memory is cursed by the enemies of good order and democratic institutions. But history will do him justice and assign him a distinguished place among the heroic martyrs to the sacred cause of national independence and happiness. I hope the numerous friends of Mexico in New Orleans and among the bitter row of his unhappy widow, who I understand is now in your city. The last words he pronounced were for his country, his wife and his children. His memory will be dear to all. All the nations received here relative to the battle of Puebla, agree in representing Mexico as having acted in the bravest manner. But daily seconded by the other generals, and falling into an ambush he lost the victory after the most heroic exertions to obtain it. He was induced to enter into a truce which he was told was the only way to save the city, and was suddenly attacked by forces five times more numerous than his own. Notwithstanding this inferiority, the battle lasted more than five hours. After these attacks, he made himself master of the enemy's artillery and would have been victorious but for the unexpected arrival of 5000 cavalry, who bore down upon his men, already overcome by fatigue, and their number greatly diminished. At this critical moment the flight of Urra and other generals decided the fate of the gallant Mexican. In the midst of a handful of brave men he still resisted the attacks of the cavalry. But seeing that all hope was gone, he put on the coat of a dead soldier to avoid being taken prisoner; but fortune again betrayed him. He was recognized in his disguise by an officer of the cavalry, who made him prisoner, and carried him on the crupper of the same horse on which he rode to Puebla, where he was forthwith tried, condemned and executed by Santa Ana. I have been told that some minutes were allowed him to write his last adieu to his wife and children. Will Santa Ana allow the letter to go to his wife? The bloodhound is base enough for such an act of wickedness and cruelty.

After what he calls the triumph, Santa Ana has returned to Mexico where he was received with extraordinary honors. He had rejoicings, balls, illuminations, public plays, for an event over which every good man grieves. The population, however, the hero of Toluca, patriots deplore the miseries of civil war. One party weaves garlands for the victor, the other is filled with grief—on one side you hear songs of victory, on the other, wailings for the dead. Time will show us the end of this medley of things.

TENNESSEE. The Nashville Whig contains the address of Governor Cannon to the people of Tennessee. He cannot leave the Executive office, he states, to make the tour of the State, as Mr. Polk is doing, and he is therefore obliged to address the People by letter. In the course of his letter he states

"Opposed as I was to many of the expenditures of the General Government under Mr. Monroe's administration, then amounting to only ten millions annually, I am of course more decidedly opposed to the annual expenditure of nearly forty millions under Mr. Van Buren. I am opposed to committing the money power of the government to the same hand that wields the sword to the President of the United States through the Sub-Treasury, or any other scheme of Executive patronage. On the principle I was opposed to the removal of the Deposits from the Bank of the United States and to the whole course of financial policy, since pursued by the Federal head, as not only tending to an alarming increase of Executive patronage, but producing in a great degree the derangement of the currency and the partial destruction of national and commercial credit."

"I am opposed to expunging from the journals of Congress, any portion of the public records; and I am also opposed to the expulsion from their seats, on mere party grounds, the chosen Representatives of a sovereign State. I look upon both these acts as gross and palpable violations of the constitution, and deserving the severest reprobation of a free and Republican people."

"I am, and ever have been, in favor of a National Bank, founded on proper principles and regulated by Congress, calculated to preserve and secure to the people of the whole Union, a sound and convenient circulating medium of uniform and established value. This I believe to be an incident to the regulation of commerce and the currency, a duty that belongs to the Congress of the United States—a high constitutional injunction, which has, of late, been disregarded or neglected under party influence and to serve party ends."

"I am opposed to the increase of Executive patronage in times of peace. I am also opposed to the Administration of the General Government on party principles and to the influence of the Federal Government in State elections."

"Entertaining the foregoing sentiments, unless great and radical changes take place in the course and opinions of the present administration of Federal affairs, I will certainly vote for any honest Republican of ordinary talents, for the next Presidency in preference to Martin Van Buren."

FROM HAVANA. We learn that the American Consul at Havana persuaded the governor general of Cuba to sanction an ordinance to regulate the employment of seamen in the port of Havana. This ordinance or decree declares that no captain or master of a vessel in that port, shall harbor or employ any sailor or mariner, unless said sailor shall first produce to him a regular discharge from the vessel he last served in. A fine of fifty dollars is imposed for each sailor who may be employed without a certificate, and the fine is raised to one hundred dollars, in every case where the sailor may have been received on the day the vessel cleared to the custom house.

The New Orleans Louisiana learns from a gentleman recently arrived at Havana that great discontent prevailed among the natives of the Island. They are much dissatisfied with the European Spaniards, who have seized upon all employments, civil and military. There were some apprehensions of a revolt. Robberies, murders and burning houses have recommenced in the city of Havana. It was feared that the Governor General, Espellets, would find a difficult task in suppressing the effervescence that was beginning to manifest itself in the minds of the Creoles.

THE LAST BREACH OF PROMISE CASE. In the Common Pleas Court at Randall, Ohio, was tried on Tuesday last week, the case of Lasher vs. Smith, the plaintiff being a young lady of 23, and the defendant a thrifty farmer living about five miles from Randall. The testimony went to show conclusively that Mr. Smith had paid marked attentions to the lady for about fifteen months; during which time Miss Lasher had studiously avoided any intimacy with other young men of her acquaintance; and that it is more than probable that had she been otherwise than reserved towards the other young men, her acquiescence, her market (matrimonial) would have long since been made. For the defence it was contended that no breach of promise had been made out, and that although defendant might have had some thoughts of marrying Miss L., he had not committed himself; and furthermore, that plaintiff had false front teeth and wore false curls of different color from her own hair, which defendant was not aware of until the time when he abandoned his efforts, and after allegation, however, was not fully proved by defendant; and the jury, after ten hours consultation, agreed to a verdict in favor of Miss Lasher for $120.00 (Randall) big.

BUREAU AGREE, APRIL 6. We understand that the French Admiral, who had the grounds of the American and British Consuls, lying at the mouth of the river, was actually carried into effect by the barque Perle, which were not to be able, and that he was repulsed to the energetic and peremptory demands of the American Commissioner, by an unconditional surrender of the said barque, with the cargo they had on board. The unjustifiable capture of these vessels, has laid the Government of H. M. the King of the French under the obligation of repairing the heavy losses sustained by the parties interested, as well in their inward and outward cargoes, as in the vessels themselves, their charter money, and we should conceive that the damages demanded will be of very serious amount.

PROSECUTION OF STEAM CAPTAINS. On the 27th ult., at New Orleans, the trial came on in the U. S. Court of several steamboat Captains, on the Mississippi, for not having wire or chain under and which was, as the law of Congress directs. The constitutionality of the law was the point at issue. Mr. Sidel, U. S. Attorney, contended that Congress had the power to regulate commerce over all the navigable waters of the U. S. States; and as to the title of the law which was defective, embracing only passengers, the law, in the end, showed that freight and all classes of steam vessels were intended. Judgment of the Court was postponed.

THE U. S. NAVY. We are sorry to learn, says the New York Gazette, that the American Navy is likely to lose the services of some of its most meritorious officers. More than fifty young men, some say one hundred have volunteered for the Texas Navy. The reason assigned we have long known to be a great grievance, viz: lack of promotion.

THE INDIAN MURDERERS AT APALACHICOLA. The Apalachicola Gazette gives the details of the late massacres by the Indians at Rico's Bluff, and Kettlefinger. They are horrible in the extreme. At Rico's two children were tomahawked, their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, upon whose residence the attack was made, escaping with difficulty. At Kettlefinger the tragedy was still more inhuman; besides the individuals shot down, several children were thrust alive into the flames of the burning houses.

NEW BOOKS.
JUST published, the BOSTON ANTHEM BOOK; a selection of Anthems, Motets and other Sermons. Edited by Lowell Mason. Being a new work, designed for the Private Practice of Chorus, for Concerts, Religious Anniversaries, Ordination and Dedication services, Thanksgiving and the various public occasions for which particular music is required. Most of the pieces are already well known and of established character, but which, being gathered through numerous publications, it has been difficult to procure in sufficient numbers for the accommodation of Chorus and singing societies. Several new pieces or those which have not before appeared in this country, are added, which it is believed will prove interesting and useful.
The Life of Haydn, in a series of Letters, written at Vienna, followed by the Life of Mozart, with observations of Metastasio and on the present state of Music in France and Italy.
Sketches of William Penn by W. A. Allcott.
Sketches of Public Character by Lord Brougham.
France's Reign of Terror, being a Sequel to letters on Paraguay.
Birds and Flowers, and other Country things, by Mary Howitt.
